

Billy & Bonnie move home

Once upon a time there were two beautiful little fish called Billy and Bonnie. They lived in a little rockpool on the beach with their mummy and daddy .

Billy and Bonnie were bright shiny colourful fish and they loved swishing in and out of the little caves in their rock pool playing hide and seek and peek a boo. They had lots of fun together.

Mammy and daddy were big puffa fish who used to get cross with each other . When they were cross they would puff up into a big ball with spikes on.

They looked scary when this happened and they would swim around madly and bump into each other and make lots of big scary waves in the rockpool.

Mummy and daddy puffa fish were too busy puffing their chests out and getting cross to realise that little Billy and Bonnie were scared and getting hurt.

They were so busy making big waves they they even forgot that they had a very special job to do ...they were supposed to be looking after Billy and Bonny.

They should have been showing them how to play lots of fishy games and feeding them lovely green seaweed to help them grow big and strong. They even forgot that they needed to make Billy and Bonnie feel like very special fish. Mammy and daddy puffa really weren't doing a good job of taking care of Billy and Bonnie at all.

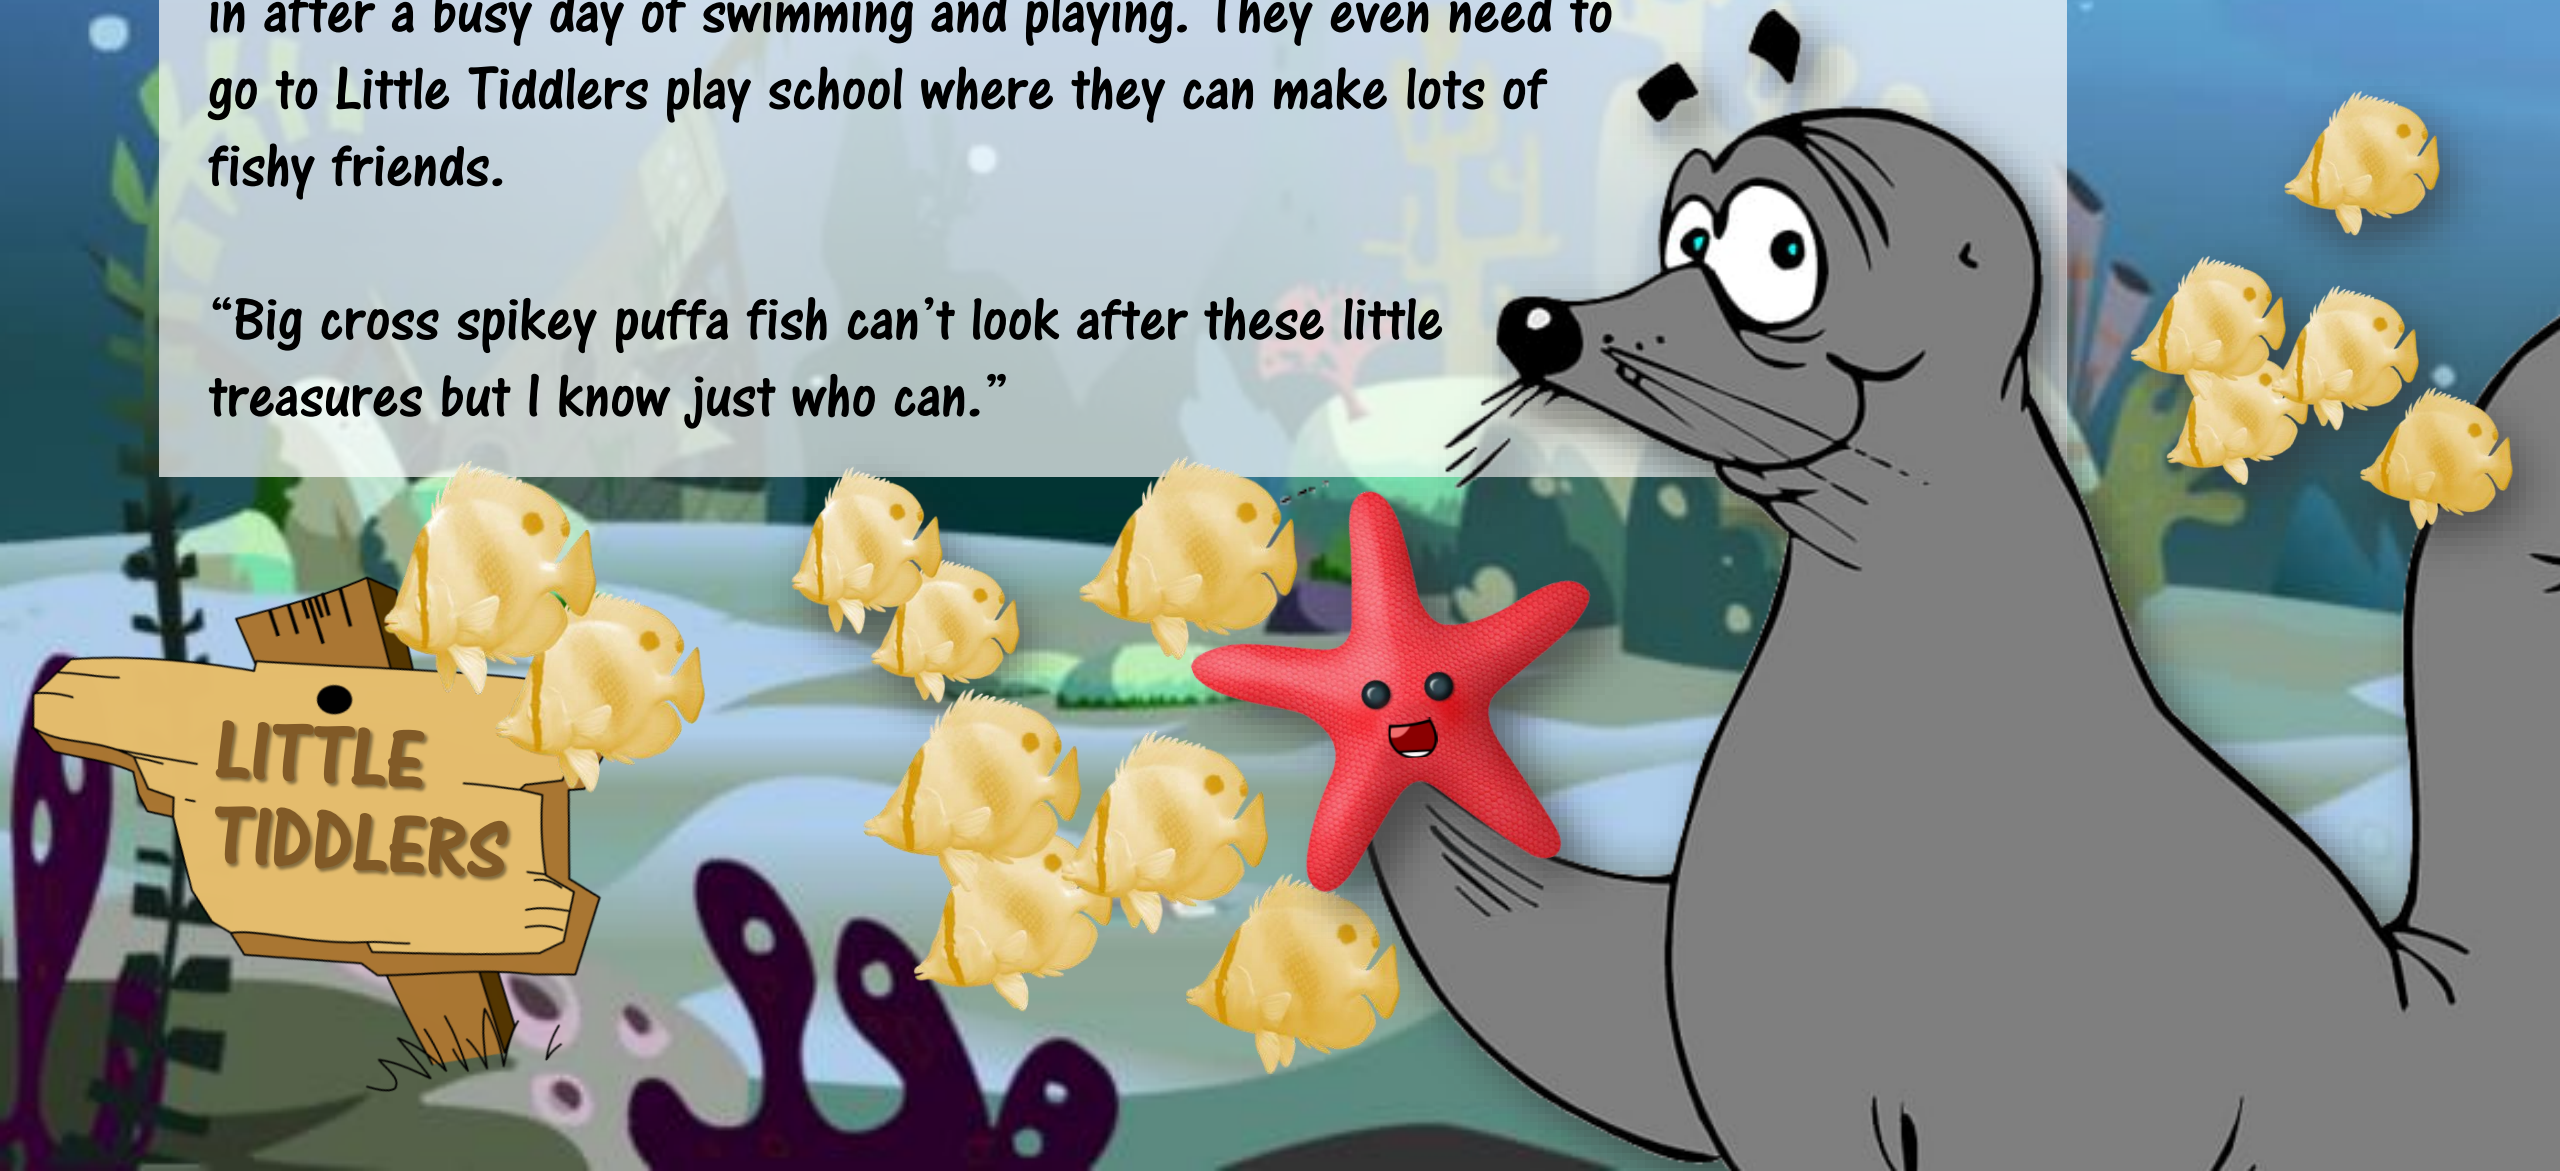

Luckily Sally Starfish used to come and visit their little rockpool from time to time and she thought “This is not good, poor Billy and Bonnie look sad and scared”... they even look a little thin, their brightly coloured fishy scales were starting to lose their beautiful sparkle and were turning brown.

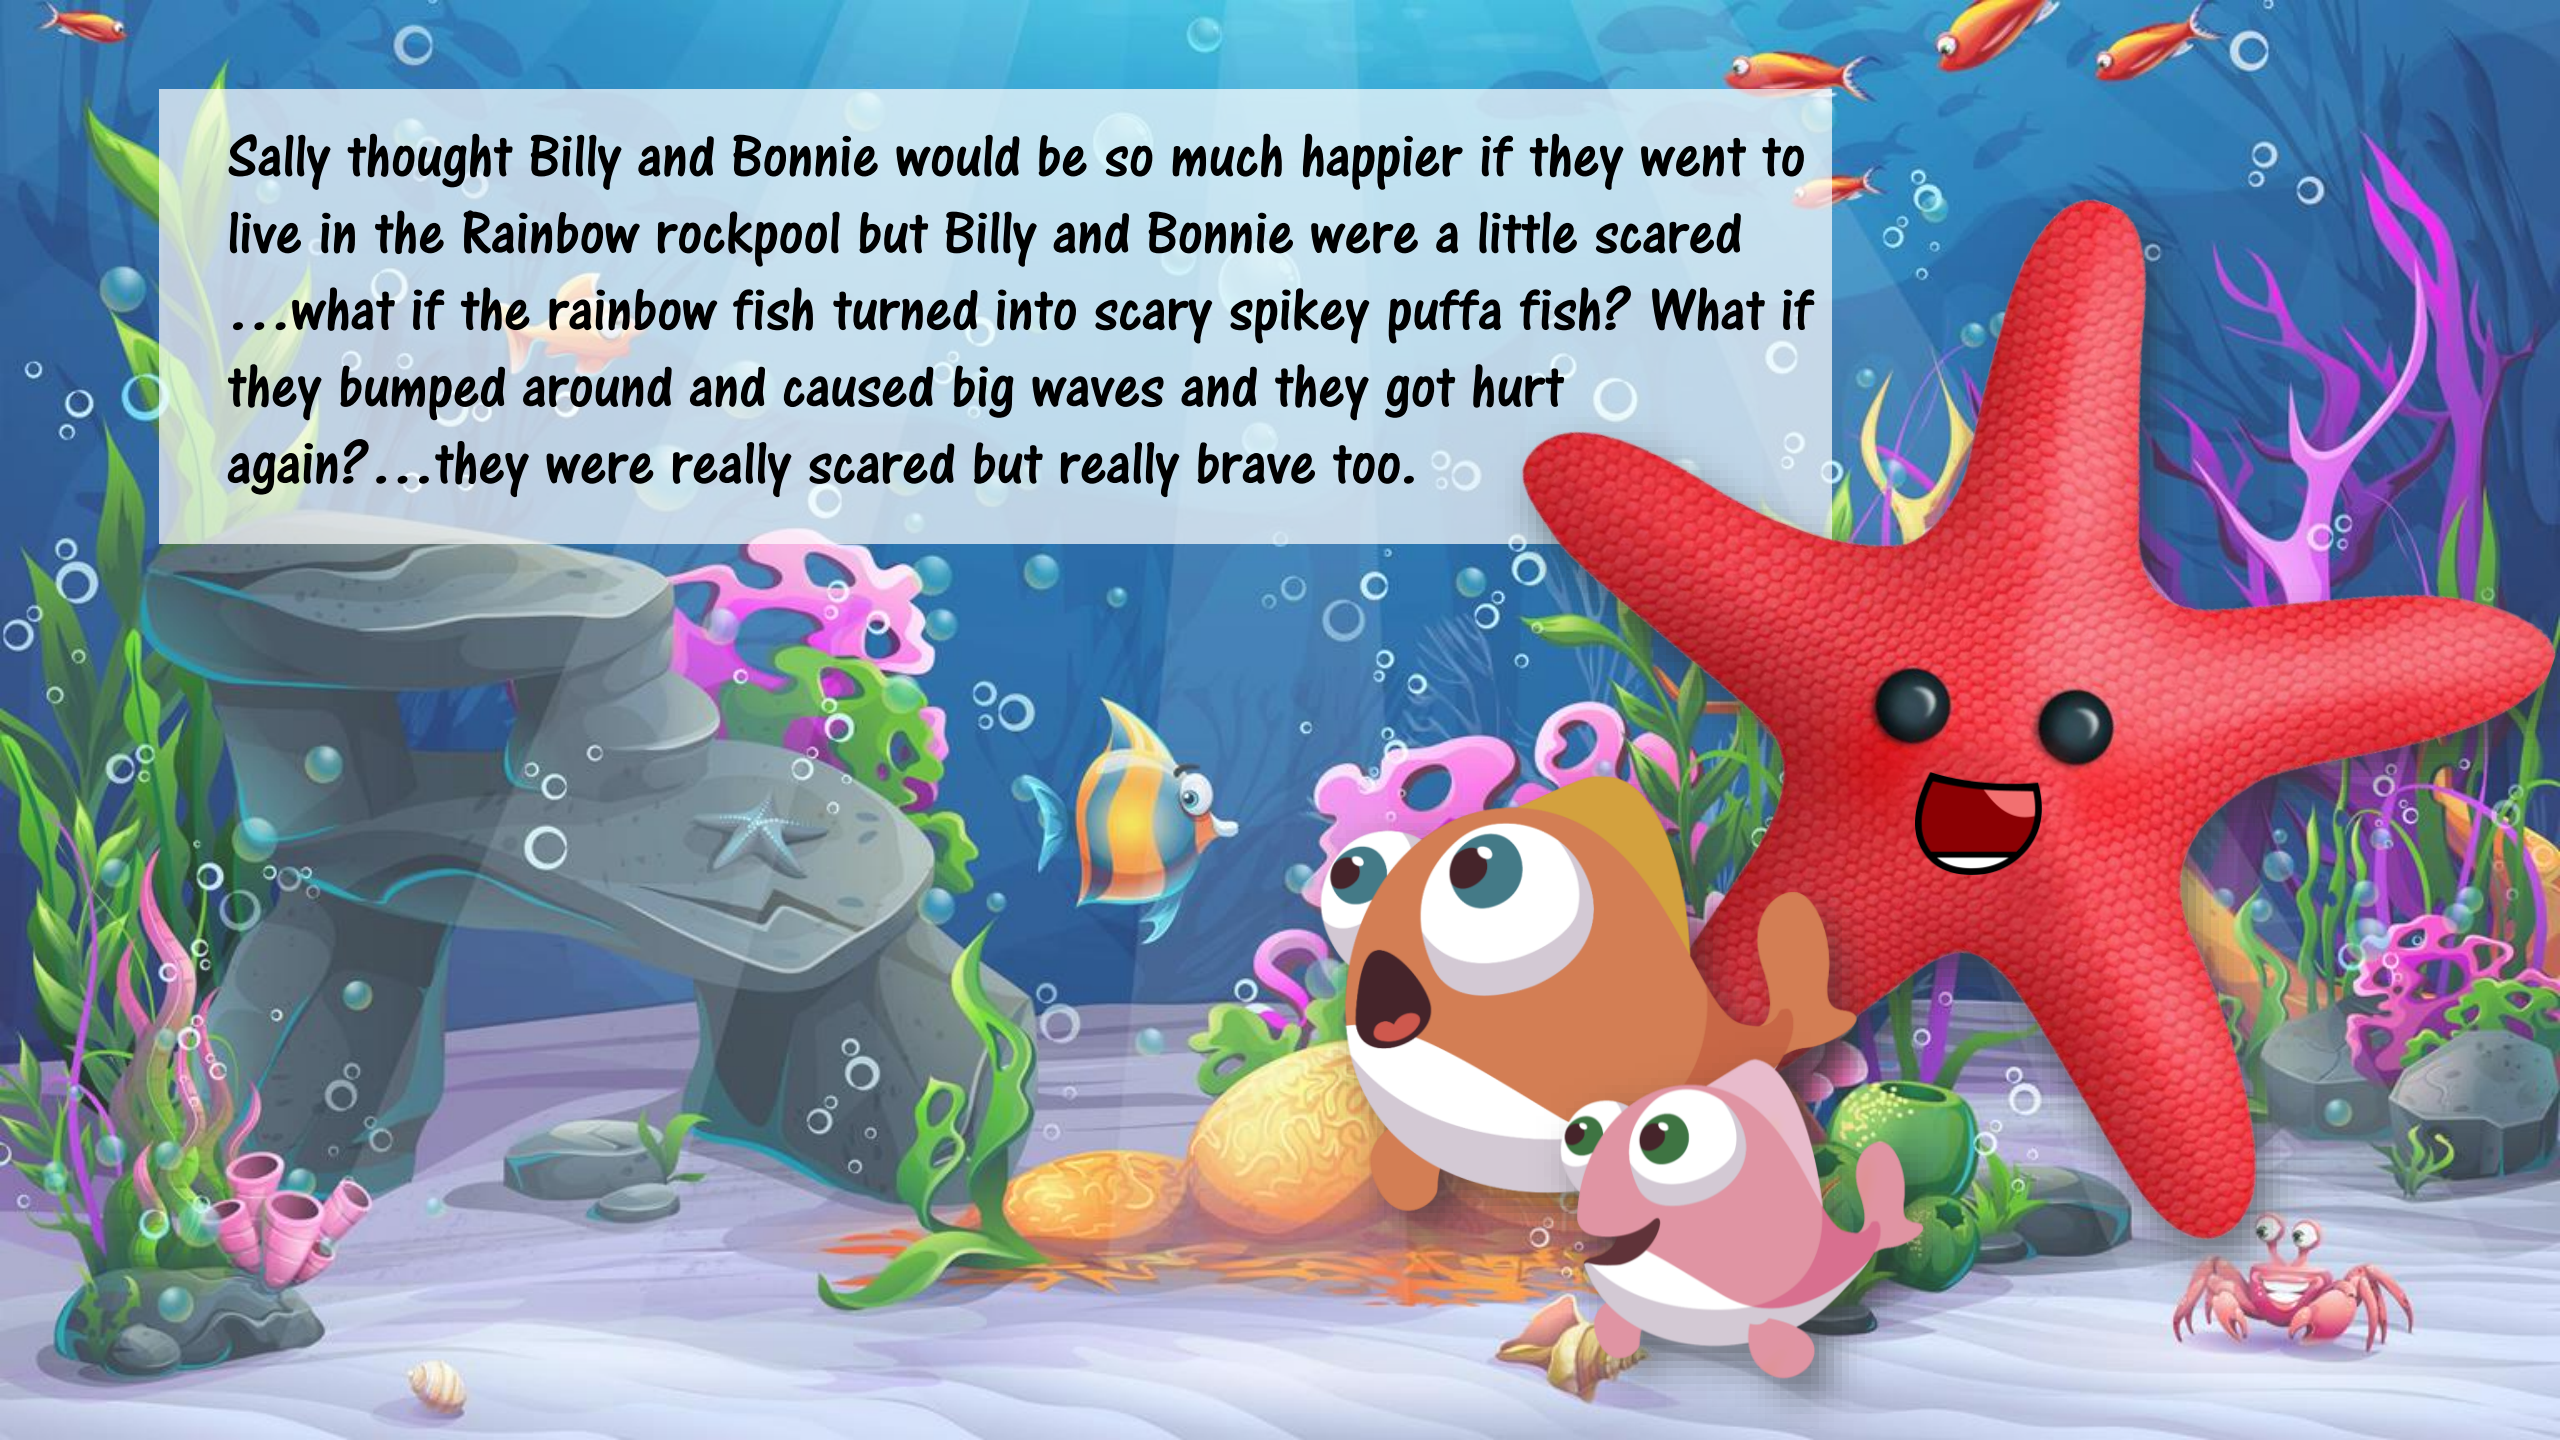

Sally knew that this really wasn't a good sign so she decided to go and see Sam the Sealion who everyone goes to see when they have a big worry . He's big and strong and always knows just what to do when there is a big worry in the sea world.

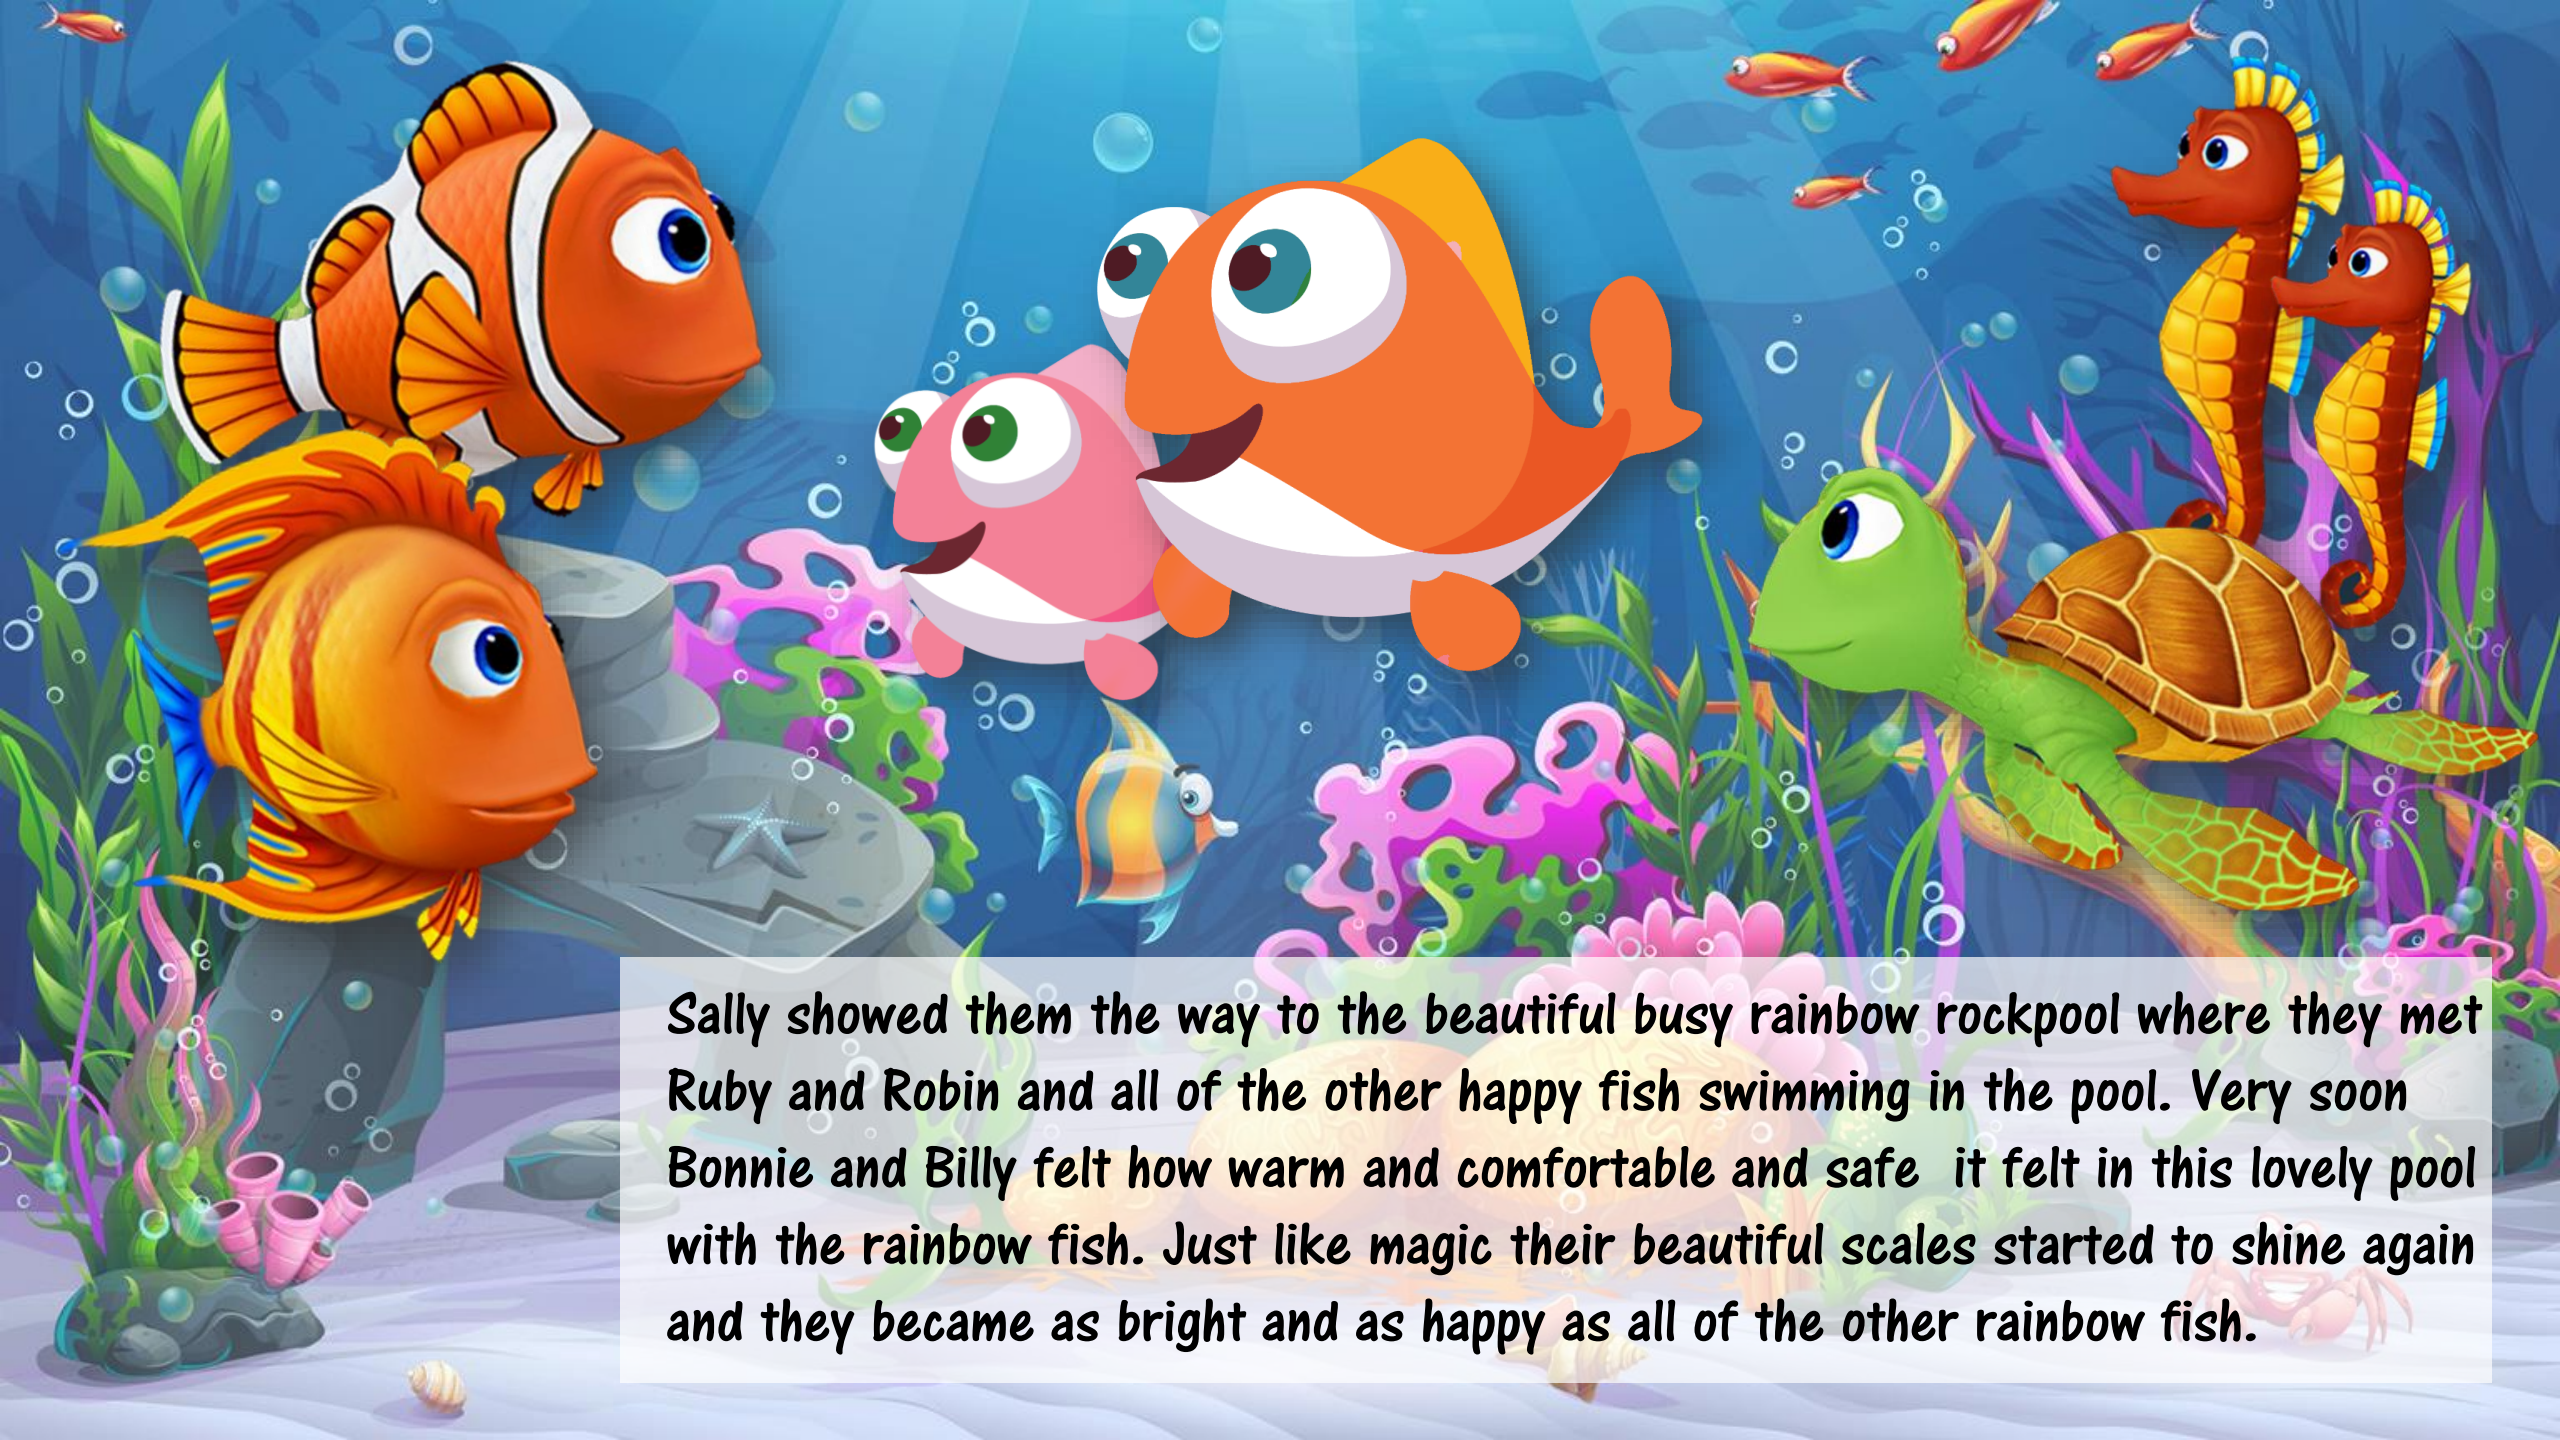

“Oh no” said Sam the Sealion “.....those little fish need to live in a rockpool where there is lots of lovely seaweed to eat and great big shells to snuggle down in after a busy day of swimming and playing. They even need to go to Little Tiddlers play school where they can make lots of fishy friends.

“Big cross spikey puffa fish can’t look after these little treasures but I know just who can.”

Sally thought Billy and Bonnie would be so much happier if they went to live in the Rainbow rockpool but Billy and Bonnie were a little scared ...what if the rainbow fish turned into scary spikey puffa fish? What if they bumped around and caused big waves and they got hurt again? ...they were really scared but really brave too.

Sally showed them the way to the beautiful busy rainbow rockpool where they met Ruby and Robin and all of the other happy fish swimming in the pool. Very soon Bonnie and Billy felt how warm and comfortable and safe it felt in this lovely pool with the rainbow fish. Just like magic their beautiful scales started to shine again and they became as bright and as happy as all of the other rainbow fish.

Ruby and Robin showed them how good life could be in the rainbow rock pool, they even took them on adventures to other rock pools where they met lots of other rainbow fish and sea horses and even a beautiful mermaid. Even though life was good Billy and Bonnie still felt a little sad and scared sometimes but they knew they could always ask Ruby and Robin or Sally starfish for help with their wobbly feelings. And Sammy Sealion would not let them get hurt all over again. Together they would make sure that Billy and Bonnie would be safe and loved wherever they were. Now that their scales were all sparkly and shiny again they knew they were brave enough to overcome any wobbly feelings they may get.
